

Porous shape memory dental implant

We produced bifurcated bone-like shape memory implant with desirable tooth-root fixation capability by compact-sintering of TiH₂-Ni-urea mixture. The primary constituents of the porous product were Ni and Ti.

We could adjust the pores' shape, size, and interconnectivity for favorable bone ingrowth by using urea as a space holder

.

Materials Science and Engineering: C